INFORMATION CIRCULAR

To: Members of the Staff

From: The Director of Personnel

Subject: 1994 COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION FOR EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS AND LANGUAGE REFERENCE ASSISTANTS

1. A competitive examination for Editorial Assistants and Language Reference Assistants will be held on 14, 15 and 16 September 1994 at Headquarters in New York. The purpose of this examination is to establish rosters from which present and future vacancies of Editorial Assistants and Language Reference Assistants at the G-7 level will be filled in the Editorial Service and the Documentation, Reference and Terminology Section, in the Translation and Editorial Division, Office of Conference Services.

2. The examination is open to staff members of the Secretariat at Headquarters in the General Service and related categories.

3. Staff members applying for the examination must:

(a) Have satisfactorily completed their secondary education;

(b) Have an excellent working knowledge of English and of two other official languages of the United Nations (Arabic, Chinese, French, Russian or Spanish). Knowledge of additional official languages beyond the required three, as well as of other languages, will be an asset. The Board of Examiners appointed by the Director of Personnel requires that candidates be able to support their claims of knowledge of these languages by relevant documentation in their official status files. Staff members who have enrolled in the United Nations Language Training Programme must have passed the Language Proficiency Examination in these languages. Those who have not pursued language courses in the United Nations must substantiate their claim of knowledge of these languages by attaching to their applications photocopies of diplomas or certificates from a language school or a brief explanation of how they acquired knowledge of the languages claimed;

(c) Be familiar with electronic data and word processing.

4. All applications will be reviewed by the Board of Examiners. All applicants will be notified of the decision of the Board with respect to their application. Decisions of the Board are final.

5. The written examination will consist of two separate papers for Editorial Assistant candidates and Language Reference Assistant candidates, and three papers common for both groups of candidates, as follows:

Editorial Assistants

Part I: Preparation of United Nations documents in English and two other official languages of the United Nations to be chosen by the candidates from six documents provided in the six official languages. Candidates will be required to identify and correct elements in these documents that should be verified and researched for accuracy and adherence to United Nations editing standards prior to editing (3 hours 30 minutes).

Language Reference Assistants

Part I: Preparation of United Nations documents in English and two other official languages of the United Nations to be chosen by the candidates from six documents provided in the six official languages. Candidates will be required to identify and provide references to elements in these documents that should be verified and researched prior to translation (3 hours 30 minutes).

Editorial Assistants and Language Reference Assistants

Part II: An essay of approximately two hundred and fifty words in English or French. Candidates will have a choice of two topics on a general United Nations-related subject (1 hour).

Part III: Questions on the structure of the United Nations system of organizations and the names of major international organizations (45 minutes).

Part IV: Questions on documentation of the United Nations system of organizations (45 minutes).

An optional paper, to be scheduled separately, on the preparation of United Nations documents in one or more official languages of the United Nations other than the languages chosen by the candidates in part I of the examination will be offered to qualified candidates at their request (1 hour 10 minutes per language).

The use of dictionaries or any other reference material is not permitted during the examination.

6. On the basis of the results of the written examination, the Board will invite selected candidates for a test of their computer skills that will normally take place 10 to 12 weeks after the written examination. The computer skills test will consist of a hands-on exercise. The Board will then interview each candidate to assess the candidate's suitability to perform as an Editorial Assistant and/or Language Reference Assistant, including ability to work as a member of a team, the candidate's general culture, professional experience and knowledge of the United Nations. The interview is an integral part of the examination; therefore, candidates who are invited to an interview should not assume that they will be offered an assignment.

7. Two separate rosters for Editorial Assistants and Language Reference Assistants will be established on the basis of the ranking of candidates' cumulative scores in the written examination and computer skills test. The Board of Examiners will review the overall results of the examination and recommend to the Director of Personnel the most suitable candidates for inclusion in the rosters. All candidates will be informed in writing of the Board's final recommendation with respect to their candidature. Recommendations of the Board are not subject to appeal. The Board does not release individual scores.

8. Staff members included in the two rosters will be assigned to posts according to the required language combinations as and when vacancies occur in the Editorial Service or the Documentation, Reference and Terminology Section in the Translation and Editorial Division, Office of Conference Services, for a trial period of two years. Staff members who are already at the G-6 or G-7 level will be assigned at their respective level. Others at a lower level will be granted a special post allowance at the G-6 level. Staff members who complete the trial period successfully and are recommended by the Office of Conference Services and by the Office of Human Resources Management will be promoted to the G-7 level. Staff members who do not successfully complete the trial period will be reassigned to posts at their previous level, and the special post allowance, if any, will be discontinued.

9. The main duties and responsibilities of Editorial Assistants and Language Reference Assistants are as follows:

(a) Editorial Assistants: to carry out in three official languages of the United Nations the research work needed for the editing and subsequent publication of the Official Records of the United Nations and to prepare manuscripts for editing in those languages.

(b) Language Reference Assistants: to carry out research in three official languages of the United Nations to provide support to translators to ensure accuracy, uniformity and timeliness in the translation of the official United Nations documents and publications by supplying the relevant language services with reference material and terminology information.

10. Staff members applying for this examination should complete the attached form and submit it to the following office, not later than 15 August 1994.
